Headline:
Dry with sunny spells today. Rain and snow Saturday morning.

Today:
Friday will be a largely dry day with sunny spells and light winds, but cold, with patches of frost, fog and low cloud in the morning. Maximum temperature 3 deg C (37 deg F).

Tonight:
A largely dry evening with occasional clear spells. Becoming increasingly cloudy and windy overnight with a band of rain spreading eastwards later, bringing a risk of snow and ice. Minimum temperature -3 deg C (27 deg F).

Saturday:
Cloudy and windy with rain, sleet and snow, clearing around midday. Snow predominantly on higher ground, but could fall to lower levels in places. Sunny spells and isolated showers thereafter. Maximum temperature 5 deg C (41 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Sunday and Monday will be largely dry with spells of sunshine. Chilly overnight however, with patchy frost. Cloudy on Tuesday with outbreaks of rain, possibly turning to snow.
